THIS WEEK

No sooner have World Book Day costumes been packed away and the children are involved in Science Week. Again, the buzz around school has been palpable, with our incredible curriculum supported by this fantastic initiative - which is celebrating its 30th anniversary. It has been so wonderful to observe children across the school keen to explore and be challenged without any boundaries.

Thank you to those who were able to attend Sherington's first SEN Café led by Jo Richards - our new Inclusion Manager. I know that Jo is planning a series of drop-ins, with the focus on a different area of need each time. The PowerPoint presentation shared on Monday will be available on the school website next week. Maybe this weekend will bring sub-tropical temperatures... Whatever the weather, enjoy your days.

Science Week

This week at Sherington, the children have been investigating the theme of 'Time'. Each year group - from Nursery to Year 6 - have had a different enquiry question to focus on and have carried out research and conducted experiments to support answering them. Learning from the week will be available to view in the hall during the Pupil-led Parents and Carer Consultations. There may even be questions for you to ponder.

Our Thursday assembly was a 'Live Music Assembly' organised by Miss Armson. The children got to see and hear different types of music repertoire being played by members of our wider Sherington community. Many thanks to those who volunteered to share their musical talents. It's safe to say that all children (and adults) in the room enjoyed the performance immensely!

Red Nose Day

Thank you to all who have donated. We have raised a brilliant £325.64 so far for Comic Relief.

Attendance

The award for last week's attendance goes to 4E with 98.9%

Word of the Day

This week's vocabulary has been: wary, frugal, parched, collaborate and static. How can you weave these in to this weekend's conversation?

In April, I am taking part in the London Marathon, running for Starlight: a remarkable charity dedicated to providing children in hospitals with the opportunity to experience what all children should - the magic of play! Starlight's mission is to boost the wellbeing and resilience of children during their illness, offering them moments of joy, distraction and laughter when they need it most. If you can, please help by donating to Starlight. Please follow the link to my Just Giving page. <https://www.justgiving.com/page/chloeprice-starlight>

Thank you for your generosity and for being a part of this meaningful cause.
